

For this project I decided to make a warehouse since it would have simple enough props to texture and create in a short time, so I'm glad that even with some constraints I face I could at least make it look okay with the subject I chose. Because of this I was able to get away with some simpler textures on some of the boxes which was very helpful considering I had to cut some corners because of some issues I had. Among other things I've been unable to use my PC that can run Maya at home, so I've only been able to work on my project in class and using the labs. If not for this some things I would have liked to add is figure out why some of my textures aren't appearing metallic, add more complex textures to some of the boxes, and add more props overall considering my initial blockout didn't have very many to begin with. I'm hoping that in the future I can make something I'm more pleased with, because I did really enjoy working on this.
